

Tony Persuitti

My name is Tony Persuitti. Flying is something we all should experience during our lifetime. I am an easy going guy with a drive to be the best at what we do. In addition to flying I love snowboarding, going to the beach, and staying active. I graduated with my Bachelor's Degree in Commercial Aviation from the University of North Dakota. There I learned the importance of safety and I carry that philosophy with me whenever and wherever we fly, especially here in the Los Angeles airspace.

I'm currently in my 7th year of flying and have over 1,600 hours. My experience includes 700 hours of flight instruction in the Los Angeles airspace as well as 700 hours flying the Embraer 145 Jet for ExpressJet Airlines. I believe a pilot gains experience not just with their total time, but having a wide range of flying experiences. I have instructed in all the aircraft at the flying club and can teach in single & multi-engine planes from private to commercial, instrument, as well as flight instructors. Whatever level you are at in your training as well as whatever plane you wish to learn in, I can tailor your training the way you want to learn.

Every student learns differently, and it is my job to make sure to present the information that best suits your individual style of learning. I look forward to helping you achieve your dream of flight.
